There are sixty men in Company A, on liberty Island, under command of Capt. A. M. Wetherlil. They are a flue-looking lot of soldiers, and several of them have been rivals for the affections of a pretty German girl of nineteen employed by Nicholas hartman, the Liberty Island restaurant keeper.

Sergt. Van and Private Miller have been the most ardent wooers of the girl, and it was apparent that the Sergeant, a soldierly-looking lellow of forty-flve, was the more favored one of the rivals.

Miller had been chafed not a little by his comrades, but his jesiousy had not caused for largest time for the sixty counties will be comrades, but his jesiousy had not caused Chairman Hackett, it was said, is not going
